

Notice of Upcoming Construction

October 16, 2018

The City of Coronado has recently entered into a construction contract with NEWest Construction Company to make improvements to the Transbay Pump Station located at the Ferry Landing Marketplace at 1275 First Street (see the map that follows this notice for the exact location). The work is expected to begin in January 2019 and be completed no later than May 24, 2019.

This notice is intended to provide general information regarding the scope of work of the project and contact information should you have any questions regarding the project.

Scope of Work:

The project is a significant rehabilitation of the existing Transbay Pump Station. It includes the replacement of existing pump station components, pipes within and around the station, and relining of the wet well (the storage area used to hold sewage before it is pumped across San Diego Bay).

What to Expect:

Work will require significant digging and trenching operations within the construction area. In addition, throughout the construction period, the pump station will be shut down and temporarily replaced with an above-ground pump system powered by temporary generators operating 24 hours a day, seven days a week, for the duration of construction. Although the entire construction area will be contained by a screened fence with sound-dampening material, the surrounding area can expect to experience some construction-related dust, odor, and noise impacts throughout construction.

For Questions/Concerns:

Should you have any questions or concerns please contact the project manager, Katie Odiorne, at (619) 522-2424 or kodiorne@coronado.ca.us.
