Subgroups

2014

Summary

The National Citizen Survey™ (The NCS™) is a collaborative effort between National Research Center, Inc. (NRC) and the International City/County Management Association (ICMA). The survey and its administration are standardized to assure high quality research methods and directly comparable results across The NCS communities. This report discusses differences in opinion of survey respondents by length of residency, housing tenure, children 17 or under in household and age.

Responses in the following tables show only the proportion of respondents giving a certain answer; for example, the percent of respondents who rated the quality of life as “excellent” or “good,” or the percent of respondents who attended a public meeting more than once a month. ANOVA and chi-square tests of significance were applied to these comparisons of survey questions. A “p-value” of 0.05 or less indicates that there is less than a 5% probability that differences observed between subgroups are due to chance; or in other words, a greater than 95% probability that the differences observed are “real.” Where differences were statistically significant, they have been shaded grey.

The margin of error for this report is generally no greater than plus or minus five percentage points around any given percent reported for the entire sample (316 completed surveys). For subgroups of responses, the margin of error increases because the sample size for the subgroup is smaller. For subgroups of approximately 100 respondents, the margin of error is plus or minus 10 percentage points.

Notable differences between demographic subgroups included the following:

- Results in some areas differed by age. Younger residents (age 18-34) tended to rate community characteristics relating to Mobility more positively. However, older adults (aged 55+) rated aspects of Built Environment, Recreation and Wellness and Community Engagement more positively than younger residents. General facets generally received higher ratings for Governance and Participation from those aged 55+ than from younger respondents. Older residents also had higher rates of participation in Economy and Recreation and Wellness.
- Several areas showed broad differences by length of residency. Coronado as a place to live and the overall appearance of Coronado were viewed more positively by residents who had lived in Coronado less than five years. Similarly, residents who had lived in Coronado less than five years also gave higher marks to aspects of Community Characteristics, including Mobility, Natural Environment and Recreation and Wellness. However, those living in Coronado for 20 years or more tended to participate more in General, Safety, Natural Environment and Education and Enrichment aspects.
- Few areas showed broad differences by housing tenure. Residents who owned their house or condo gave higher marks to Coronado as a place to retire, ease of public parking, cost of living, neighborliness of residents in Coronado, air quality and cleanliness of Coronado than those that rent their house or apartment. House or apartment owners also tended to have higher participation ratings than those who rent.
- Differences observed by children under 17 in the household varied. Residents who had children under 17 in their households tended to have more positive views about Community Characteristics than those who did not have children 17 or under in their household. They also tended to have higher participation rates in the facets of Mobility, Economy, Recreation and Wellness, Education and Enrichment and Community Engagement.
